THOUSANDS RECEIVE HILLIG, HOIRIS AT COPENHAGEN FIELD

Flyers Spend Night At Bremen Before Ending Flight

COPENHAGEN, June 26.—Greeted by countless thousands delirious with joy, Otto Hillig, Liberty, N. Y., photographer, and Holger Hoiris, Danish pilot, brought their monoplane "Liberty" down on the Kastrup Airport here today, ending a trans-Atlantic flight that began at Harbor Grace, early Wednesday.

The adventurous pair, who characterized their flight as that of "a couple of immigrants returning home," arrived at 2:06 p. m. (8:06 a. m. E. S. T.) from Bremen, Germany, where they spent the night. They landed at the German city last evening, utterly exhausted, after wandering lost for hours over the map of Europe.

The trans-Atlantic flight which ended at Krefeld, Germany, yesterday afternoon, but anxious to reach Copenhagen in the quickest possible time, the airmen took off again after an hour's rest.

Remaining awake at the controls only with the greatest difficulty, Hoiris managed to take the plane as far north as Bremen, but found it impossible to continue on to Copenhagen without a night's sleep.

Despite the long delay, the people of Copenhagen lost none of their enthusiasm over the daring venture of the 55-year-old photographer and his young pilot. After spending all day yesterday at the airport only to trek sorrowfully homeward at evening when hope was virtually abandoned, thousands returned to the field today to accord a fitting reception to the first men ever to choose Copenhagen as the goal of a trans-Atlantic flight.

Touching scenes were enacted when Hillig and Hoiris stepped out of their plane two hours and twenty-eight minutes after taking off from Bremen.

Hoiris was greeted by his white-haired mother, weeping for sheer joy. Hillig was embraced by his brother, who with other relatives had stood almost ceaseless vigil ever since the flight began.

PLANES AWAIT GOOD WEATHER

NEW YORK, June 26.—Start of three more trans-Atlantic flights from Roosevelt field today was tentatively postponed until early next week following a report from the weather bureau that weather conditions over the north Atlantic were unfavorable.

George Endres, who will hop off with Sander Magyar in the plane "Justice for Hungary," said he hoped to get away tomorrow morning if conditions were favorable, but the report that the weather over the north Atlantic was closing in again made it unlikely that the start would be made for two or three days at the earliest.

The other two flyp teams waiting for favorable weather are Russell Boardman and John Polando, whose goal is Constantinople; and Clyde Pangborn and Hugh Herndon, who hope to fly from New York to Moscow without a stop on their proposed globe-circling flight.

QUEEN HELEN TAKES POISON BY MISTAKE

LONDON, June 26.—It is Queen Helen, wife of King Carol of Rumania, not Magda Lupescu, Carol's former paramour, who is suffering from poison, according to dispatches from Vienna to the Daily Express.

Magda, the beautiful red-haired woman who lived with Carol in France for five years, was reported yesterday to have taken an overdose of a sleeping potion because of chagrin over the king's attitude towards her.

Now it is reported that it is Queen Helen who took poison. According to the dispatches, she made a mistake in selecting a bottle from her medicine chest.

TRADER HORN DIES

TRADER HORN

LONDON, June 26.—Alfred Aloysius Horn, world famous as "Trader Horn," died today at his home in Whitstable. He was stricken with pneumonia two weeks ago and, for the past few days, doctors had held out no hope for his recovery. He was 80 years old.

Trader Horn spent practically his whole life in obscurity in Africa.

COMPROMISE HOPED FOR IN DISCUSSION OF WAR DEBT RELIEF

Mellon and Stimson Will Attempt To End Differences

WASHINGTON, June 26.—President Hoover's proposal for a year's suspension of all inter-governmental war debts was being buffeted around today in the channels of European diplomacy, with few indications that it can make port for some days.

Secretary of Treasury Mellon is in Paris today, endeavoring to persuade the French that it is their advantage as well as to the world's, that a year's complete debt holiday be declared. Secretary of State Stimson sails for Europe tomorrow to take up where Mellon leaves off—if he fails.

Thus, the unusual spectacle will be presented of two of the foremost officials of the American government on European soil engaged in trying to convince European statesmen of the value of an American remedy for Europe's ills. There are few precedents for such a situation; certainly none since President Wilson went to France with a company of advisers in 1918-19 to "sell" Europe on American ideals.

The administration in Washington marked time today, awaiting the results of Secretary Mellon's conference with the French. Until Secretary Mellon makes a report, there will be no move toward answering the French note which was received here Wednesday night.

This note, in effect, rejected President Hoover's proposal for a complete cessation of war debt payments by the diplomatic expedient of a counter-proposal. The French counter-proposal was that Germany continue to raise, for whatever means possible, the "non-responsible" portion of her reparations payments, amounting to some $110,000,000 and deposit the same in the bank for international settlements which was set up under the Young plan. France, on her part, is willing to promise that these funds will not be withdrawn for a year, but held in escrow, and even doled back, if necessary, to Germany and other needy nations, in the form of short term credits.

President Hoover and his advisers consider this alternative proposal to be unacceptable. It strikes, they contend, at the very root of the Hoover idea, which was to have a complete breathing spell in the matter of inter-governmental obligations. The effect of it, they believe, would nullify the very results which Mr. Hoover hoped to achieve, which was instantaneous financial relief for France.

Inevitably a compromise must be worked out. That is Secretary Mellon's job—and possibly Secretary Stimson's.

The French are frankly afraid that after a year's suspension, Germany could not be coerced into resuming reparations payments under the Young plan.

FRENCH MAINTAIN POSITION

CABINET IS WARNED THAT DEBT HOLIDAY HURTS YOUNG PLAN

Left To Parliament; Moratorium Reply Is Made Known

PARIS, June 26.—A warning that suspension of unconditional reparations payments from Germany might undermine the validity of the Young plan was sounded by Premier Pierre Laval today in reading to the chamber of deputies the French government's official reply to President Hoover's war debt proposal.

The reply revealed that the cabinet has decided to leave the entire matter in the hands of the French parliament "whose decision will be final."

"The government is ready to ask parliament, whose decision will be final, to accept a moratorium on debts and reparations," the premier said.

"There is great danger of shaking confidence in the value of signatures to the Young plan if the suspension affects unconditional payments."

Although indicating general acceptance of the moratorium proposal, the French government's reply revealed France would not countenance Germany's escape from payment of the unconditional portion of her reparations obligations to France.

"Solution of the German crisis will not be found merely in reduction of the German budget but also in extension of credit," he said.

"The French government feels general suspension of payments would be an insufficient remedy."

M. Laval's statement was greeted with wild applause from the right and center. The left remained silent.

Immediately after the reading was concluded, the chamber recessed.

WASHINGTON, June 26.—The reply of France to President Hoover's debt moratorium proposal, made public here today, disclosed what was already well known—that while the French are willing to forego collection of part of Germany's reparations for one year, the are unwilling that Germany should escape paying the unconditional portion, amounting to some $110,000,000 annually.

"The French government," said the note, "considers that there is moral interest of the first order in not postponing in any way the payment of the unconditional annuity, even during the period contemplated by President Hoover."

Mere diminution of the amount of the charges on the German budget will not in itself, the note stated, solve Germany's problem. What is needed, the French said, is credit, and to that end she pledged herself, if the other reparations beneficiaries similarly agree, to go on collecting the unconditional part of the German annuities and deposit them in the bank of international settlements, to be doled back, if necessary, in the form of loans to the Reich.

France called attention to her own financial problems, asserting that the public debt is four times that of Germany, and concluded by an appeal for all governments to cooperate for the preservation of treaties.

On the basis of the French reply, Secretary of State Stimson was moved to declare that the French government has shown "gratifying cordiality" to the president's proposal, although he admitted that there were suggestions in the note which "do not accomplish the full measure of relief" contemplated by Mr. Hoover.

SHOOTING WITNESS GUARDED BY POLICE FOLLOWING THREAT

Testimony May Prove Important Clue To Chicago Killer

CHICAGO, June 26.—Under guard to prevent reprisals, J. N. Rogers, manufacturing executive, today told how he had talked to Jacob Kaufman, murdered because he knew too much about the official of the Motion Picture Operators' Union, as he lay dying.

Within ten minutes after Rogers had propped up Kaufman's head on a pillow and tried to ascertain the identity of his slayer, Rogers himself was threatened and warned to keep silent and was trailed home in his car.

Rogers' testimony was so important that state's attorneys said it may lead to identifying the killer, although they refused to state whether Kaufman had told Rogers who it was.

Rogers was driving past the garage in which a youth in golf togs shot Kaufman when he heard the shots. He turned his car to where Kaufman lay.

When he returned to his own auto, a dark skinned man came up to Rogers and said: "Did you see what kind of a car the killer got into?" Rogers replied that he had not noticed. "You don't know anything—see? Keep your mouth shut or you'll get yours," the stranger warned.

Meanwhile the grand jury continued its investigation of the at-fair of the union out of which Kaufman's murder occurred. He was slain shortly before his scheduled appearance before the jurors.

WEATHERMAN SEEKS NEW RECORD BUT XENIA HAS PLENTY OF WATER

John T. Weatherman hopped on early Friday morning, bent upon establishing a new altitude record, and was optimistic before his take-off that the heat record of 95 degrees set in Xenia Thursday, would be eclipsed.

The abnormal heat wave sent mercury in local thermometers soaring to a new record for the year Thursday afternoon, and during the night the minimum reading was 72 degrees. Early Friday morning, the mercury started its upward climb once more, soon reaching 87 degrees with the prospect Thursday's peak would be exceeded before the day ended.

No heat prostrations were reported, despite the torrid temperatures.

Water consumption in Xenia, 600 gallons of water were pumped.

SEVERE RAIN LASHES OHIO

COLUMBUS, O., June 26.—Apparently sweeping a path through the center of the state a terrific windstorm which lashed northern Ohio today whipped into Columbus this afternoon. The storm struck suddenly with severe force, uprooting trees and causing frightened pedestrians to run to shelter.

A check-up through the central part of Ohio showed the storm cut a damaging path into the heart of the state.

Beginning in northern Ohio the vicious wind blew down hundreds of trees and poles and pelted the district with one of the worst rains and hailstorms in history.

A driving rain in the downtown section through which traffic was impossible, shattered windows of many office buildings. Eight plate glass windows on the first floor of the May Co., large department store on the public square, were smashed, damaging hundreds of dollars worth of clothing in the show windows. Hundreds of trees and poles were reported blown over.

A rainfall of 1.02 inches within less than an hour was reported by the United States Weather Bureau. A fifty-six mile an hour wind, driving hard from the north whipped the rain.

Rain, accompanied by wind, fell in Xenia at 2:40 p. m., bringing relief to the heat suffered within the past few days. The rain is thought to be a follow-up of the storm in northern Ohio.

MINE UNION OFFICIAL TARGET OF BOMBERS

House Is Dynamited; Report 500 Strike In West Virginia

PITTSBURGH, June 26.—Two persons were hurled from their beds, and the lives of four others were endangered today when the home of Victor Garzany, secretary of the United Mine Workers, at Covedale was bombed.

Following the blast, the bombers exchanged shots with Frank Metz, neighbor of Garzany, and though a shot was fired into a crowd of people sitting on Metz' front porch, no one was injured, police said.

Joe Delina, also of Covedale, was arrested by state police for questioning in connection with the bombing. Police said he had a slight body injury, but they declared that he had not been shot.

The bomb was set off in the rear of the house just after Mr. and Mrs. George Herb, Jr., and Garzany and his two children, Richard, 5, and Betty, 3, had retired for the night.

Metz said after the blast while the crowd on his porch was wondering what had happened, a shot was fired. He said he fired twice into the air on the hope of frightening the bombers away.

Garzany said he had returned to work yesterday because of the agreement between the United Mine workers and the company.

NO RELIEF APPEARS FOR HEAT STRICKEN IN CENTRAL STATES

Fair And Warm Still Prevails; Cities Report Deaths

THE BAD NEWS!
COLUMBUS, O., June 26.—Today's weather forecast: Ohio—Generally fair and continued warm tonight and Saturday.

St. Louis, Mo., and Montgomery, Ala., were the hottest places in the country Thursday, each reporting a maximum temperature of 90 degrees. Detroit and Kansas City, with 98 each, were next high while Los Angeles had a 96 and Miami, Fla., winter playground, showed a temperature of only 84. Portland, Ore., was coolest of important cities with a rain that drove the temperature down to 66 but White River was the actual "coldest spot" with a mark of 44. Minnesota had a 46 temperature and The Pas showed 48 degrees. Xenia's high, reached past mid-afternoon, Thursday, was 95.

Generally fair and continued warm weather for Friday night and Saturday was the prospect for this locality based on the report of the U. S. Weather Bureau at Columbus. A maximum temperature in the upper nineties, was predicted from Columbus. The air pressure is evenly distributed being generally normal or slightly above but a low pressure area is entering the field of observation now from the Canadian northwest. Mexican border states are slightly cooler, as is the gulf coast and the southern Appalachian districts, while the rest of the country reported warmer weather, with the Missouri, Upper Mississippi and Ohio Valleys being principal targets of the hot wave.

CHICAGO, June 26.—Little relief was in sight today for the sun-parched middlewest which suffered yesterday under record temperatures.

The best the weather man at Chicago, C. A. Donnel, could do was to predict a slightly cooler breeze and that only for the region affected by Lake Michigan.

The 95 degree heat in Chicago, the highest of the year, caused at least nine deaths, four of them by drowning among the hundred thousands that sought some degree of comfort from the lake.

High temperatures prevailed throughout this section, unofficial readings going as high as 108. While the official figure here was given as 95, on the street in the loop it was 102.5.

Waterloo, Ia., reported the mercury rose to 105, Galesburg, Ill., had 102 and so did Dubuque, Ia., and many cities reported an even hundred. Among them were Omaha, Sioux City, Davenport and St. Louis.

Crops were roasting in the rural areas and livestock was suffering. Horses falling dead in their harness. Several farmers collapsed in Illinois and Indiana while at work in their fields.

COLUMBUS, O., June 26.—Heat that pushed the temperature to the middle nineties today had resulted in three more Ohio deaths from prostration and drowning.

While at work as a drygoods packer, Alfred M. Ryland, 65, collapsed here and died almost at once.

In Cleveland, where the high temperature was 90, Jack Murphy, 45, a horse trainer, died from a heart attack which physicians said was doubtless hastened by the heat.

Fifteen-year-old Louis H. Engler, while seeking relief from the heat in Barnes Creek near New Philadelphia, went into the water beyond his depth and was drowned.

Willard Stivers, a Pomeroy business college student, was overcome on a downtown street here, but recovered and was removed to his home.

The heat also was indirectly responsible for the death of Miss Erica Ruckett, 20, a nursery maid, at Cincinnati. With the temperature at 94, Miss Ruckett remained in the bathtub after washing her hair and was electrocuted a few minutes later when she applied the dryer to her hair.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., June 26.—California climate was just like most of the rest of the country today—hot.

A sprinkle of rain brought but little lowering of the 96 degrees which gave this city its highest mark since last summer. Twenty-seven brush and grass fires in the vicinity made these places even hotter.

KILLS MADDENED PET
CHARDON, O., June 26.—Norman C. Pomeroy, ex-patrolman, probably saved his own life here because he carried a knife. Pomeroy's pet dog suddenly became mad and leaped for his throat. He stabbed the dog through the heart as it lunged through the air at him.

J., jail where she is being held and grilled by police in an effort to make her divulge the whereabouts of her fiance, Herman Duker, who is sought for the murder of a Baltimore milk wagon driver.

Mrs. Hale Hostess At Tea At Country Club

THE Xenia Country Club was the scene of a delightful affair Thursday afternoon when Mrs. S. G. Hale, of Detroit St., entertained at an informal tea honoring Mrs. Millen Davidson, who returned here several months ago after spending the winter in Guatemala.

Sixty guests were received at 4 o'clock in the main room of the club house which was attractively decorated with large bouquets of summer flowers in various-colored hues. In the receiving line with Mrs. Hale were Mrs. Davidson and Mrs. Hale's mother, Mrs. G. J. Graham.

The only out-of-town guest at the affair was Mrs. S. M. Heitz, Dayton.

Guests were served a two-course luncheon at quarter tables placed on the porch of the club. Each table was centered with a bouquet of summer flowers and green was the outstanding color in the luncheon. Mrs. Hale was assisted in serving by the Misses Ellen Sayre, Katharine Chew, Janet Frazer, Pamilla Tilden, Betty Flynn and Margaret McKay.

FORMER GREENE COUNTESS IS WED IN CALIFORNIA.

In a simple and beautiful garden wedding Mr. Irwin Harner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Harner, Spring Valley, was united in marriage to Miss Evelyn Starbuck, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. M. B. Starbuck, Whittier, Calif., at Whittier, June 18.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Walter J. Homan in the garden of the Starbuck home.

Mr. Willis Harner, brother of the bridegroom was best man and Miss Maribelle Dyer, of Whittier, was maid of honor. Miss Dyer wore a gown of pale green lace and carried an arm bouquet of yellow roses and orchid sweetpeas. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white ivory, satin and a veil of tulle. Her bridal bouquet was made up of bride's roses and white sweet peas.

Preceding the ceremony a program of nuptial music was given by Mr. Granville Starbuck, violinist, uncle of the bride; Miss Margaret Hadley, soprano, accompanied by Miss Carol Seawell. Following the ceremony an ice course was served to the guests.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Harner left for the East and expect to spend the summer in Ohio.

Mrs. Harner is a graduate of Whittier High School with the class of 1925 and Whittier College with the class of 1930. Since her graduation she has been engaged in post graduate work at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles. Mr. Harner is a graduate of Spring Valley High School and also of Whittier College. He is planning to take a medical course this fall.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

And he said, The things which are impossible with men are possible with God.—St. Luke, xviii, 27.

DEBT TO MOTHERS

The cabin in which Abraham Lincoln's parents were married has been made a shrine, at Harrodsburg, Kentucky. One of the tablets that have been placed in it to tell its history bears this inscription:

Nancy Hanks — 1784-1818.

Born in the backwoods of Virginia, reared amidst the primeval forests of Kentucky, died in the wilderness of Indiana. Yet through these obscure years of toil and hardship she fulfilled a deathless destiny. Mother of Abraham Lincoln, sixteenth president of the United States. Gentle, industrious, patient, courageous, her short and simple life epitomizes the heroic virtues of pioneer women; her name will ever be an inspiration to the motherhood of every land. Frail of body, she gave to humanity the most colossal figure of modern times. Untutored herself, she planted within his youthful breast a love of learning. Despite her narrow environment, she endowed her son with a breadth of vision that saved the Union and made a people free. "God bless my mother," said Abraham Lincoln. "All that I am or ever hope to be, I owe to her."

All any man is he owes to his mother. Other men might have saved the union. Abraham Lincoln's claim upon the affection of his countrymen rests less upon his political genius than upon his tremendous humanity. Amid the clash of argument and arms, he never forgot the woman who had carried him in her womb, who had guided the tottering steps of his childhood and who had gone down to a pioneer mother's grave before her inspiration to her son to become something more than a rude fate had permitted her to be had frustrated.

A good mother deserves a good son. Abraham Lincoln's mother had one. All the Gettysburg speeches that could be delivered from now until war is a thing of the past could not attain the sublimity of that humble confession: "God bless my mother. All that I am or ever hope to be, I owe to her."

SAD REMINDER

When the American Civil war broke out, General Robert E. Lee said: "I am a Virginian"—and followed his state out of the union.

A separate government has recently been set up at Canton, as an incident in the civil war that has been going on in China intermittently ever since the Manchu dynasty was ousted. "I am a Cantonese," says Chao-chu Wu, Chinese minister to the United States, and he resigns his commission.

As an appointee of the Nationalist government at Nanking, Wu was instructed to apply to the government in Washington for permission to export to Nanking war material that he felt would be used to kill his friends and fellow-provincials in the confederacy of South China. Wu could not bring himself to do this.

The parallel between his case and that of General Lee is a sad reminder that sectional wars still make it necessary for men to choose between the more intense loyalty to locality and the larger but for many looser loyalty to country.

MONEY'S HIDING PLACE

Mayor Walker of New York, said at the meeting of the Advertising Federation of America, that one thing that troubles him, is as to where is the hiding place of the money which was so evident in 1928 and 1929. There is just as much real wealth as there was at that time. The only thing that has been obliterated is the fictitious value created by crazy speculation.

Money kept in hiding places is unfruitful. It does nothing to reproduce itself. The reserves in the banks are piling up, until many bank officers hardly know what to do with them. It is up to advertising, as the New York mayor suggested to lure this hiding money out of its retreats.

ADVERTISING THE GOVERNMENT

Gov. Roosevelt, of New York, asked the Advertising Federation of America, to help advertise the government, so as to interest the people in government problems.

The newspapers are doing that very thing in practically every issue. They report what the local, state and federal governments are trying to do for the nation, they commend the achievements of these services, they point out failures and lacks that should be remedied. No system of government in the history of the world ever got so much advertising as our government gets, and the bulk of it is free.

The people who fail to read all this publicity about government activities, are much like the folks who do not read store advertising, and who consequently pay $1.00 for an article they might have had for 50 cents if they had read the business notices. Similarly our neglected citizens often fail to learn the means by which the costs of public services could be reduced, and made more efficient.

Albert Fall could not have listened in with any relish on the castigatory references made at Marion to the betrayers of Mr. Harding. All hope of executive clemency went up the flue that day.

All sorts of plans are being advanced to make prosperity permanent in America: but we haven't seen one yet that exceeds in sense the good old plan of combining industry with thought and ambition.

Mr. Capone has been in jail before, so it isn't going to be as though he never had been used to such things.

If Mr. Pinchot and Mr. Roosevelt go into cahoots, they will have to reach an agreement to occupy the White House on alternate days.

A Long Island pup quit after he had tackled a third rail for a third time. Some people tackle things which scorch just as badly but don't know enough to quit.

The fact that Mr. Hoover started his 1932 campaign at two toms may not be so deadly as it seems.

If civilization should go smash, some people, some time will build up another, and perhaps better one.

On his fiftieth birthday Mayor James J. Walker, of New York, said that he was happy in his "vacation." If that's what he calls his office, maybe the vocational guidance people should offer their services to politics throughout the United States.

MY NEW YORK

BY JAMES ASWELL

NEW YORK — New York is the cheapest city in the world for the young man with $35 a week. But he doesn't know it. He thinks his steel-ribbed monastery is Babylon. His Greenwich Village one-room-and-bath is an exotic "studio." Subway rides to dates in the Bronx are full of piquant romance. He is away from humdrum home; least a year he never realizes that he is an economic monk; that lazy high jinks were left home on country club veranda.

Finally, however, he wakes up. Begins to know New York whether he knows himself or not. He drops behind the skyline into the veritable town. He becomes a New Yorker. That is a curious and exciting process when you are young—full of secession, rebellion, quick mixed ecstasy and slow comprehension of you do not know quite what something, though—rather terrible, charged with flux and fury and challenge: a young man's dish.

I would take every young man of a certain type and hurl him into New York on his own at twenty-one. I mean the breed with imagination and taste for fantastic competition and howling contrast; who can learn to be hard when it's necessary to be hard.

Here he will cross high points to remember when he is old. Some of mine—

MANHATTAN PRIMER

Believing F. Scott Fitzgerald was the greatest writer in the world and finding him sitting at the next table with his wife, Zelda, in the old Jungle Inn... Whiffing for the first time the dank but strangely not unpleasant breath from a subway kiosk; standing terrifyingly on the front car platform of a hurrying South Ferry express and feeling defiantly young, ready for life and death, ready for New York... Callow? I was, but those were sharp, authentic impressions, indelible as any I will ever know.

Hearing Fred McIsaac admit in a Street & Street editorial sanctum that he had made $50,000 writing pulp-paper thrillers the year before. (Ha! There was a racket! I could do it, too....) Enjoying a free swim from Swokey Kruger, swimming champ I'd sidedicked with in Florida, when I found him running a pool concession at Manhattan Beach... Watching Dr. Man, the wizard surgeon, take out an appendix in eight minutes at Post-Graduate Hospital—and wondering if I would be spotted in the audience as a layman and ejected.

MEANING-IF ANY

Those were the first months. It didn't take much to panic me then. Maybe it still doesn't. Anyway... Back in New York after five months recuperating from pneumonia, walking the streets glazed with summer rain looking for a job... Getting that spine-curdling thrill from an ambulance siren at the rush hour through Times Square... Watching David Belasco rehearse Jack Dempsey and Estelle Taylor in a play... Back in newspaper work through a lucky break... Or unlucky... Attending my first big literary "tea" in brownstone house where Horace Liveright does business—meeting everybody in the literary firmament at one fell swoop... Deciding authors are the dullest companions on earth.

Random flickers of the town, those But, run off like a movie, filled up with millions of others, they signify New York. Names and moods; people who crackle like fire works in the public prints of the world and momentary up-rushes of perspective on the steel and stone mazes which magnetize those people from far places.

VACATION TIME

HOOVER, LABOR LEADER APPARENTLY ARE AGREED AS TO ECONOMIC "PLAN"

WASHINGTON. — While no definite authority can be quoted for such an assumption, Washington generally regards President Hoover's announcement in his recent Indianapolis speech, of an "American plan" of economic development consisting simply in "giving the American people a chance," and Matthew Woll's "warm-blooded plan of democratic idealism to meet the cold-blooded Communist five-year plan" as intentionally complementary.

Anyway, it is a coincidence that Mr. Hoover's address was delivered and the Woll suggestion "released" to the press on the same day, very much as if the labor leader had timed his publicity to synchronize with the presidential utterance. It perhaps also is noteworthy that the Woll proposal stresses the theory, so often emphasized by Mr. Hoover, of the necessity for the nation to solve its economic problems without political government's interference.

Whatever interpretation may be placed upon the simultaneous broadcasting of the president's speech and publication of the Woll program, the two obviously do dovetail to a nicety—the speech clearly placing upon the American people the responsibility of working out their own economic salvation; the labor official, at precisely the right juncture, submitting a scheme by which he believes they can do it.

Briefly put, writing as acting president of the National Civic Federation (Elihu Root, honorary president) to Chairman James W. Gerard of the federation's industrial inquiry commission, Mr. Woll advocates a conference representing the country's every class of citizenship, to "ascertain and evaluate essential economic and industrial factors, estimate our probable and normal industrial growth, determine the tendency of new fields of activity, and seek co-operation for the promotion of industrial balance."

Possibly further to the point is the fact that one of Mr. Hoover's cabinet members, Secretary of Labor William M. Doak, is the civic federation's honorary vice president, and his name appears on the stationery on which the Woll proposition was circulated—implying that administration approval of it, many folk think.

"Why," I asked Editor-Manager Chester M. Wright of the International Labor News Service, of which Mr. Woll is president and through which his letter to Mr. Gerard was made public, "would a conference of the nature outlined be an improvement upon such a gathering of large employers as was summoned by Mr. Hoover at the beginning of the present depression, or, on the workers' side, than a convention of the A. F. of L. for example?"

"It would be immensely broader," answered Editor Wright. "An employers' conference represents only one industrial group. An A. F. of L. convention represents another. Assembling separately, they have no opportunity for an exchange of ideas. "A joint meeting would be far more illuminating. Agriculture also requires representation—and banking and large and small merchandising; every industrial and business element, in short. Many of them already have organizations, and thus could select their spokesmen quite readily. To those lacking organization an incentive would be furnished to effect it, greatly to their own advantage; especially to the advantage of our large and particularly helpless class of so-called white collar workers."

"With a deliberate body of this sort permanently established and holding regular meetings," continued the labor editor, "no group in the country would be denied a fair chance to acquaint all the others with its own class' difficulties and necessities, and a spirit of mutual understanding and helpfulness assuredly would be fostered. Plenty of conclusions undoubtedly would be arrived at, but would there be any machinery for making them compulsorily effective?—or would the force of public opinion be relied on to make them so?"

"My opinion is," replied Editor

Wright, "that, were compulsion resorted to, the plan inevitably must fail."

And he pointed to a paragraph in the Woll letter:

"It * * * is the conviction of organized labor in America that political government, valuable above price in its field, lacks the competency to govern industry," which "must find and apply its own measures of guidance * * * through correlations of its own essential parts of divisions. The age of one-man control has passed. If that were not true one-man control would have prevented our present disastrous experience."

Among the adverse critics of the Woll plan, Executive Secretary Benjamin C. Marsh of the People's Lobby, the militant political reform organization headed by Prof. John Dewey of Columbia, sums up his objections most succinctly. "An industrial conference," he says, "might accomplish good results if it were not for our present systems of ground rentals and of bank charges for the use of credits. These two systems operate wholly independently of industry and their levies upon the country reach a total between 12 and 14 billions annually."

"Against such a handicap no industrial readjustment can make much headway in the direction of relieving depression."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

BY MRS. MARY MORTON

MENU HINT
Cold Sliced Tongue and Ham
Creamed or Scalloped Potatoes
Stewed Tomatoes
Lettuce With French Dressing
Homemade Bread
Orange and Lemon Pie
Iced Tea
Is there anyone that can resist homemade bread? In spite of the fact that bakers turn out loaves of uniform goodness, there is something about even the smell of the homemade article that makes one ravenous. Try this recipe for making it once in awhile on a cool day in summer and hear the family cheer.

Today's Recipes
Four-Hour Bread — One pint milk, one cup water, two tablespoons sugar, three tablespoons shortening, one and one-half teaspoons salt, one cake compressed yeast, bread flour, Scald milk, add water, when lukewarm add yeast, sugar, shortening, salt. Let stand 10 minutes, add three cups flour, stir smooth. Cover and keep warm until flour (about 40 minutes) then add flour to make a stiff dough and knead 15 minutes. Cover and keep warm until doubled in bulk, then knead five minutes, divide into three loaves. Put into well-greased pans, let rise until a little more than doubled in bulk and bake 45 minutes.

Orange and Lemon Pie — Bake crust for pie. For filling beat a cup of sugar into two tablespoons butter. Add beaten yolks of two eggs and one cup milk. Stir and add juice of one lemon and grated rind and juice of one orange. Place three tablespoons flour into two tablespoons water and stir until smooth, then add to the mixture. Cook filling over slow fire, stirring constantly, for it scorches easily, until thick, and pour into pie shell. Make a meringue by beating the two egg whites with two tablespoons powdered sugar, spread over top of pie and bake until brown.

Good Camp Healthful Experience

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Discussion of the precautions which should be observed in summer camps suggests that parents should inquire into the enforcement of proper regulations in any camp before committing their children to its care. Such warnings may have a sinister ring to some. It may be well to state plainly, then, that a properly managed summer camp is a splendid and health giving experience for a child. However, there are certain dangers possible in the experience, and it is as well to face those frankly and do all that is possible to avoid them. Such is the only purpose of the articles on the subject this week.

Contact infection is a hazard wherever any considerable number of people are gathered together in as intimate association as obtains in camp life. We observed this constantly in army practice during the war. Whenever a new draft or new influx of men came in to camp, we could expect an outbreak of various contagious diseases. The more isolated the family of the individual before coming to camp, the more likely he was to such diseases. Thus farm boys were much more likely than city boys to come down with measles, mumps, scarlet fever, etc. The same thing is true of the early years of school life.

To some extent this is avoidable. Vaccination against smallpox, typhoid fever and diphtheria should be enforced on all candidates for admission to camp. Every one of these diseases is distinctly preventable and any child who has not been so vaccinated is in danger in a camp. When camp authorities insist on such precautions they are entirely within their rights.

The camp offers a splendid opportunity to teach the elementary principles of emergency treatment for sprains, cuts, burns, wounds, drowning and other hazards. There is also chance to teach cleanliness of person and living quarters, disposal of waste, etc. Proper medical supervision will select out those children unfitted for strenuous exercise and will impress on such individuals the amount of exertion they are capable of in after life.

The importance of sensible and comfortable clothing, from shoes on up, should be a point of the educational facilities of camp life. Among the staple accessories of the medical chest should be antiseptics, dressings, bandages, splints, etc. Various kinds of preventive serums, such as tetanus antitoxin, diphtheria antitoxin, meningococcus serum and anti-venom for snake bite. Fuming nitric acid should be available for the bites of rodents and domestic animals.

Finally, there should be a telephone in camp for emergencies.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS

C. G. "While undergoing a physical examination some time ago, the doctor told me that I was in splendid physical condition with the exception of a tipped uterus. It does not give me any trouble, but I understand I could not become pregnant on that account. Could you suggest any form of exercise to correct this?"

Answer: Such conditions are very common and seldom, if ever, are the cause of any trouble. They do not prevent pregnancy or unless bound down with adhesions do not interfere with the normal pregnancy.

E. G. T. "Will you please advise me if an operation is necessary for fistula?"

Answer: Operations on fistula are quite successful and usually imperative.

Editor's Note: Six pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin for each and a self-addressed, stamped envelope, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper, or Central Press Association, 1435 East Twelfth Street, Cleveland, O. Attentions To Twin Trouble Wife

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

It's pitiful and humiliating how small and mean we humans can be at times. We do little, petty things to annoy those we love, knowing that they are annoying but not being big enough or seeing far enough to refrain from doing them. How do we set that way?

Sometimes tragedies result and too late we regret our thoughtless words and acts that caused it. Following is a letter that points the moral.

"Dear Miss Lee: I am 22 years old and married over a year. I have a twin sister who looks just like me and often comes to the house.

"My husband is very attentive to my twin; in fact, much too much so to suit my mother or me. He claims he gets us mixed up and really thinks she is I at times. "His eyesight is poor and he is very near sighted, but we do not dress alike and he should be able to notice this. My sister just laughs when I speak to her about it and thinks the confusion a great joke. "Do you believe he mixes us up accidentally, and what would you advise my doing? Stunned."

No, to be perfectly frank, I don't think your husband mistakes your sister for you. I think they both think it funny to tease you and probably get a kick out of fooling around together. Nothing serious about it, you know, but just the thrill that comes from doing something they know they shouldn't—like playing with fire or skating on the edge of a precipice.

If you have told them both that you don't like it and they persist, better keep still and pretend not to notice, no matter how hard it is. They are pretty poor sports, and I think, to hurt you that way. Maybe unconsciously your sister is a little jealous of you for being married first and enjoys making you feel uncomfortable in consequence. When she gets a boy friend or husband, she'll be all right.

It's Safe To Apply Deodorant

By GLADYS GLAD

"Dear Miss Glad: I am afflicted with excessive underarm perspiration and have been using a reliable deodorant to correct the condition. However, my mother says that it is harmful to attempt to stop perspiration. Is she right? Dummy."

Some of the more conservative physicians maintain that it is injurious to attempt to suppress excessive perspiration. The majority of medical men, however, contend that this is not true. A certain amount of perspiration is normal. But when perspiration is excessive, and is accompanied by an offensive odor, correction of the condition is not only permissible, but also advisable. As long as a good deodorant is used, one that does not cause the destruction of the sweat glands, or the complete suppression of the formation of perspiration, no harmful effects should accrue.

"Dear Miss Glad: Those scanty little bathing suits can't phase me any longer, thanks to you. See, by following the advice contained in your booklet on 'The New Figure,' I've developed by bust by two inches, and reduced my waist by three and my hips by four inches. My entire figure is now harmoniously proportioned now. However, I'd like some further advice. My hair is a sort of mousey color, and my skin is of a light, creamy tint. I'd appreciate it very much if you'd tell me what colors I might wear in my gowning. Priscilla."

If your coloring is delicate, you should avoid blatant hues in your gowning. Loud, vivid colors like purple, scarlet and bright green will contrast unpleasantly with your skin, will seem to wash you out.

They will not flatter your skin by their vividness, but will make you appear unattractively colorless by contrast. Because your own natural coloring is so delicate and faint, you should choose shades that add glow to your complexion. Pastel shades, and medium colors are best. I think that you will find rich browns, soft peaches, warm tans, orchid, pinkish beige, and soft bluish greens especially becoming.

"Dear Miss Glad: As my hair is quite gray, I have been having it dyed at intervals during the past year. I would now like to obtain a permanent wave, but have heard that it is impossible to permanently wave dyed hair. Is this statement correct?" Mrs. Copelan.

It is always somewhat of a problem to permanently wave dyed hair satisfactorily. It can be done, however. Of course, only a skilled and reliable operator should be permitted to administer the wave. And a test curl should be made first to determine what effect the waving process will have on the hair. The permanent waving procedure sometimes discolors hair that has been dyed. And if, when the test curl is made, the hair becomes discolored, the administering of the entire wave should be postponed until the hair has been put into a more restorative condition. It is usually advisable, before the permanent wave is procured, to submit the dyed tresses to a series of hot oil treatments to nourish the hair roots and the scalp, and to make the hair soft and glossy. For the success of the permanent depends, to a great extent, upon the health of the hair and scalp.

TEAMS MATCH RUNS UNTIL EIGHTH WHEN CHAMPIONS WIN OUT

Six-Run Innings And Homer Feature Of League Battle

With terrific reports heard for miles around, the champion Krippendorff team and the All-Stars took turns at blowing up in successive innings of their American League softball contest at Cox Field Thursday night, but after the blasts had subsided, the league leaders scored an unearned run in the eighth and beat their opponents for the fourth straight time this season, 8 to 7.

For the first five innings the teams struggled along on even terms. The All-Stars tallied a run in the fourth at the expense of Luttrell, Krippendorff pitcher, on singles by Lang and Blackburn, on a fly by Moll, Lang racing home from third after the catch.

In the last half of the round, Krippendorff drew up on even terms once more when Anderson, slugger, hit a home run, fashioning a home run off one of Russ Kimber's best tosses.

Then the Krippendorff team staged a luster in the sixth inning, bunting six hits with a couple of errors to register six runs before the side could be retired. In this weird stanza, Christ, Anderson and Gultice singled, Foley and Jones doubled and Burton hit a triple.

Six runs to the good, Krippendorff could not protect its huge advantage and what did the All-Stars do but stage a great comeback and produce exactly six runs on their own account in the first half of the seventh, also on six hits and a few errors.

After Weaver had singled and Kimber was safe on an error, Danegous Del McCoy was inserted as a pinch hitter and he inspired his mates with a rather fluky double, the ball striking the third base cushion and bounding away. McClellan then singled, Gagner tripled, Putnam singled and so did Blackburn, thus enabling the All-Stars to match the Krippendorff rally with one of the same dimensions.

Krippendorff tabbed the winning run in the eighth. Gultice singled and Burke was safe on an error. Gultice took third as Foley forced Burke at second and Jones hit another infield roller and Gultice, after being trapped between third and home, scored when Tommy McClellan, catcher, unfortunately dropped Baldwin's throw after tagging the runner as he legged it across the plate.

Each team collected thirteen hits. Anderson hit a homer and Gultice and Galtice three singles for the winners. Putnam, Lang, Blackburn, Weaver and McClellan each hit safely twice for the losers.

The All-Stars just don't seem to be able to beat Krippendorff this season, four of their five defeats having been inflicted by the 1930 American League champions.

Graham Paints and Wood's Barbers will clash in a double-header Friday night. The games should be warmly contested, if for no other reason than the heat lineups:

POTATO GROWERS IN SIX COUNTIES FORM NEW ORGANIZATION

At a meeting of a potato growers committee from the counties of Greene, Clark, Montgomery, Miami, Champaign and Darke at Springfield Wednesday evening, articles of incorporation and by laws were drafted for the Miami Valley Potato Growers' Association.

This committee has been working for some time on these papers and feels it has worked out something that will be of real value to the potato industry of the Miami Valley. The plan is to include these six counties each with a board of directors of the corporation and one director at large. Tentative plans call for grading of potatoes, federal inspection and use of new bags under a trade mark brand. One of the large chain store units of Dayton has already agreed to take the output of the association.

Next Tuesday night at 8:30 at the high school building at New Carlisle, a mass meeting of potato growers from the Miami Valley area will be held at which a plan will be explained in detail and action taken. Representatives of Ohio State University will be on hand to give suggestive aids.

E. J. Ferguson is chairman of the district committee and E. A. Drake, attended the meeting.

MAN AND DAUGHTER HURT IN ACCIDENT

E. C. Durant and 11-year-old daughter, colored, Sharonville, O., were treated for minor injuries at the offices of Dr. W. M. Hartinger, Spring Valley, Thursday afternoon after their automobile upset in a ditch a short distance west of Spring Valley on the Cincinnati Pike. Durant received painful bruises on the right leg and the child received a cut on one wrist which required several stitches to close the wound.

Mr. Durant and daughter were enroute to Mt. Vernon, O., to attend a church meeting. The child had fallen asleep on the seat and Mr. Durant lost control of the car and ran in the ditch when he attempted to place her in a more comfortable position. They returned to Sharonville late Thursday afternoon.

BUS COMPANY SUE; BICYCLIST CLAIMS PERSONAL INJURIES

Injuries claimed to have been received when a bus operated by the defendant company brushed by him so close he was thrown violently to the ground from the bicycle he was riding are the basis of a $25,000 personal injury suit filed in Common Pleas Court by J. Ervin Faris, Cedarville, against The Central Ohio Lines, Inc.

The mishap referred to in the damage action occurred last February 21 on the Jamestown-Cedarville Pike, opposite the Bruce residence, half a mile from Cedarville. The plaintiff, past 60 years of age, declares he was riding his bicycle toward Cedarville on the correct side of the highway when a bus driven by Clarence Bennett, employe of the defendant, traveling on its regular route between Chillicothe and Springfield, overtook him from the rear without his knowledge.

Asserting the bus driver did not sound a horn or give any signal warning of his approach, Faris avers the bus passed him so close as to almost hit the bicycle, and that to save himself, he extended his left hand in an effort to push himself away from the vehicle.

But the bicycle rider, the petition states, was thrown violently to the highway, sustaining a fractured pelvis bone and left hip, leg and body bruises, suffered extreme pain, was confined to bed for several weeks, has since been unable to work by reason of his injuries and is permanently crippled on the left side. Marshall and Marshall are attorneys for the plaintiff.

O. S. And S. O. Home Cadet Band, Famed Musical Group, To Make Final Appearance Here On Tuesday

O. S. and S. O. Home Cadet Band, conducted by Harold E. Seall, and the girls' octette, taken on the stage of the school auditorium during the annual concert at the institution recently. Miss Eleanor McDonnell, soprano; Miss Juanita Rankin, pianist and Marcus Shoup, violinist, are also in the picture.

The Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home Cadet Band will make its final public appearance of the year at the annual concert given for the Xenia public at Shawnee Park next Tuesday evening under direction of Harold E. Seall. The band will play Sunday to entertain crowds attending the annual community picnic at Kil Kare Park, given under auspices of Greene County Vulture, Forty and Eight Society.

by Xenia nest artists, including Miss Eleanor McDonnell, soprano; Miss Juanita Rankin, pianist and Marcus Shoup, violinist. The next day after the Home concert the band, accompanied by the octette and the guest artists, went to Dayton to present a concert at the National Military Home. The following day the group went to Sandusky and presented a concert at the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Home.

The concert party continued to Canton the next day, May 22, and presented a concert at McKinley High School there and on Saturday, May 23, presented another concert at Woodsfield High School, Woodsfield being the home of Herbert Mooney, vice president of the Home trustee board.

The band played for the American Legion Parade celebrating Monroe Day that night. The entire group was entertained in private homes during the trip and returned to Xenia Sunday. Captain and Mrs. Harold L. Hays and Lieutenant Perry Swindler, accompanied the party.

The band, under direction of Professor Seall, has won many honors and has been widely acclaimed as one of the finest musical organizations of its nature in the state. As a result the organization is much in demand for public appearances and since the northern Ohio trip has played for a district American Legion meeting at Troy and broadcast over station WAIU at Columbus.

The organization was in Delaware this week for the state encampment of the Spanish American War Veterans will go to Cincinnati soon to see the Cincinnati Reds play and to broadcast over station WKRC and will also be presented in concert at the U. S. Veterans' Hospital at Chillicothe. Dates for these appearances have not been definitely agreed upon.

POSTAL WORKERS TO HAVE SHORTER WEEK WORKING SCHEDULE

The forty-four-hour law for postal employees, enacted by congress with the idea of giving postal workers Saturday afternoons off, will become operative July 1, Postmaster C. S. Frazer announces.

"Since the postal service is more or less continuous it is impossible, of course, to close the post office entirely," declares the postmaster. "The department has asked each office to work out its own problem to give the best service possible and at the same time observe the new law."

Left to its own devices in the matter, the Xenia post office has outlined a program for Saturdays under which city carriers will make one mail delivery, the money order and register window will remain open until 2 p. m., one window will stay open until 6 p. m. for transient, special deliveries, special handling and registers. This window will also carry a limited amount of stamps for the convenience of postal patrons. Postmaster Frazer explains that the new law reducing the working week of employees from forty-eight to forty-four hours does not apply to the rural mail service and all patrons in rural districts of Greene County will receive the same service as before. The postmaster adds that the stamp and parcel post window will also close at 2 p. m. on Saturdays that mail will be received and dispatched in the usual manner and that no money orders will be issued after 2 p. m.

Can you coolly fold your newspaper on this cool Suit Value?

Here is news that 3 years ago would have been considered a scoop in newspaper circles.

Here is a suit for $20 that requires great imagination to picture... unless you see it. It has been developed in marvelous, tropical fabrics. It's styled and tailored as tho' it were going on display at a tailors' convention... and it has the ability of being a little more satisfactory than any $40 suit you ever purchased.

You can see it to-day without obligation... but few men who try it on... will take it off.

Singing gives people courage and cheers them up. When ocean liners have crashed and begun to sink, people have sung and vanquished fear. When countries have won freedom from oppression, the people have sung their thanksgiving.

Attend some Church, where people make a habit of singing.

Parents

Children imitate their parents in what they think and do. What father and mother do is carefully observed by the keen eyes of the children. Is it not obvious that father and mother should go with the children to Sunday School?

Creeds and Deeds

Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven.

—Matthew 7:21.

TRUE patriotism is translated into such commonplace things as paying our bills promptly and keeping our streets clean. The test of our ideals of world peace and brotherhood is how well we get on with our neighbors and kin. The value of our religion is revealed as much in the way we say "Good morning" as in the fervor of our prayers. Even the love of God may be translated into such ordinary things as a cup of cold water, or a kindness to "the least of these." The whole-hearted Christian need not say much about his ideals—they shine out in the way he does the commonplace things.

The Theater

One of Hollywood's safest economic assets is its dumb actors—dogs, cats and birds who act in pictures and incidentally provide the luxuries of life to many families.

According to Rex Bailey, casting director at Radio, there are about 150 persons whose sole means of income are the animals and birds they place in pictures. These are exclusive of the pet exchanges, but the odd animals owned by these individuals are also registered there.

Like extra players, they can be found at the entrances of studios, where they put their pets through routines in the hope that some executive will notice them and pro-

John Boles has an abscessed tooth and a swollen jaw which preclude his taking the role of the count in "Strictly Dishonorable," Universal's new picture. When the tooth is all right again, Boles will be cast in "Back Streets," Fannie Hurst's story. Carl Laemmle is seeking a successor to Boles in "Strictly Dishonorable" and in the meantime the rest of the cast grows apace. William Ricciardi, who created the role of the speak-easy proprietor in the New York company and played it in London, has been assigned that part and Sidney Toler, from the stage, will play the policeman.

The Mysterious Young Man

By LOUISE GERARD

READ THIS FIRST:
Ann Carmichael, daughter of a British professor who lost his life on an expedition to Borneo, accepts a position as bodyguard to Roy T. Burney, a young American millionaire who is in London on a mysterious mission, after saving his life when attacked by a gang of blackmailers. Ann, growing to care for the young man, cannot understand his attention to Lady Mooring, a middle-aged but beautiful woman with whom he seems infatuated. Knowing that he intends taking her to dinner at a fashionable hotel she arranges to be there with her mother also to determine if possible the relationship. At the dinner she sees Burney and Lady Mooring, the former all devotion. Ann is hurt and decides to stop thinking about him. Lady Mooring and her son, Hilary, seated in the drawing room at Mooring Castle were awaiting the hour for a dance. He notices her preoccupied air and queries her about it. Countess Mooring seems to have lost her safety lately Hilary believes. He notices she is wearing jewels again, pieces he has not seen for ages. Questioned about it she is embarrassed. The telephone interrupts and Lady Mooring, visibly unstrung, leaves in a taxi for the Savoy hotel. Ann and Roy Burney are sitting, talking, in his rooms at the Savoy when the door is flung open and Lady Mooring appears on the threshold. "Roy! Sweetheart!" she gasps. (NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

Ann tried to thrust the gnawing, jealous thoughts aside. One o'clock. Was the woman never going? What were they doing locked in there? At the possibilities the girl put her hand to her mouth in order to keep herself from screaming. Anyhow, he had met his Waterloo in her, Ann Carmichael. His jewels and his money would not buy her embraces and her kisses. The knowledge cheered her a little. She went back to her book. The clock struck again, a further silvery chime. Half-past one! What could they be doing? Lady Mooring had been terribly upset about something. Perhaps things had come to a crisis. Perhaps there was a divorce suit in the air with Roy Burney as co-respondent. A cheerful crowd she had got mixed up with! Still, beggars can't be choosers. She was well paid to ask no questions. With folded hands the girl sat back in her chair, the novel forgotten. Wishing herself financially free, she was brooding on all she would say to Burney under those conditions. Once more the faint, silvery

CHAPTER 16
BUT IF Lady Mooring did not see Ann, Ann saw her. Saw, too, that the pearls had gone the way of the emerald, for the necklace was gleaming softly round her panting throat. "Darling, what shall I do? That dreadful man says— " "Steady, Andromeda. Steady, Honey," he boomed in, a note of warning in his voice, as he went quickly towards her. I'm not quite alone." Surprise had kept the girl seated, but his words brought her smartly to her feet. "This is Ann Carmichael," he went on. "You've heard me speak of her." But he did not say who his visitor was. In response to this one-sided introduction, Ann bowed. Lady Mooring just looked at her. She was utterly distraught, hardly conscious of what was going on around her. Her hands were frantically clutching the boy's arm as if in him lay her only safety. Ann's one desire was to get out of the room. She made a bee-line for the door. Before she reached it Burney was at her side. "Don't go to bed just yet. I may need you," he whispered. "I'll give you a ring as soon as I'm free." "Very well," she said, surprised to find her voice was normal. The door closed behind her. She heard the key turn. Roy Burney and Countess Mooring locked in together! Alone in her bedroom Ann sat trying to read a novel, but she hardly knew what was on the page before her. With all her heart she was wishing she had never met Roy Burney. Never before had any person such power to hurt her. Two big, painful tears oozed up and splashed down on the book. It was no concern of hers what he did. He could keep a whole harem of women for all she cared. The only thing that mattered was her job. How much longer was that creature going to stay? She must have been there quite an hour already. Coming to his rooms at night in that barefaced manner! Planting his jewels! Calling him "Roy," "darling," "sweetheart." Ann tried to thrust her gnawing, jealous thoughts aside, and made a valiant effort to concentrate on the novel. A little travelling clock on her chimney-piece struck a single, silvery chime.

chimes whispered through the room.
Two o'clock!
Would the creature never go!
A few minutes later into her welter of thought, the telephone bell penetrated.
She stretched out a hand and picked up the receiver.
"Still awake, Ann?"
"It sounds as if I were, doesn't it?"
"Would you mind coming down here for a few minutes?"
His voice sounded heavy, anxious and tired. The girl wondered if she were going to be called upon to help to clear up the mess of his own making.
When she reached his suite the door was standing open and he on the threshold.
"I'm sorry to trouble you at this hour of the night," he said. "But I'm in an awful hole and you may be able to help me out."
Ann would have liked to have said, "Well, it's your own fault for messing round with middle-aged gold-diggers," but she knew it was more judicious to remain silent on the subject. Instead she said, "It's quite time I did something for my money."
Entering the room she glanced round quickly. There was no sign of Lady Mooring.
Seating herself she glanced at Burney, hoping he would offer some explanation, some plausible reason for the midnight visit.
However, he said nothing.
His young face anxious and worried, he stood by the fire, staring at it in an unseeing manner. It was evident he had had a severe shock.
"So your visitor has gone," she said, voicing the obvious.
She spoke in a normal tone, as though it were quite an ordinary thing for a woman to visit her bachelor friends in the small hours of the night. Her apparently casual acceptance of facts deceived him. No glint of the storm raging within the girl reached the surface.
As he still said nothing she attacked the subject from another angle.
"The poor thing seemed terribly upset."
Her voice was still deceptive, containing a sympathy she was far from feeling.
With an air of suddenly realizing some explanation was necessary he glanced at her.
"Yes; she was," he began in a slow, cautious manner, as if weighing every word and being afraid of saying too much. "She came here in great trouble. Something about her eldest son whom I happen to know."
It was a lame excuse, and he still avoided mentioning his visitor's name.
Ann said no more.
Burney went back to his black study. The moments passed. She waited for him to speak. Presently he again looked across at her.
"Say, Ann, in any of your travels did you ever drop across a man of the name of Lee Lawson, an American, a professional big game hunter?"
The subject was the last she had expected. Surprise kept her silent.
"I sort of fancy he's one of the Lost Legion. More likely than not he's passing under a fancy name now. A big, fair man, with bright blue eyes, a good looker, with half his left little finger gone," Burney continued.
Ann's many journeys had brought her in touch with all sorts and conditions.
"Let me think," she said.
With elbows on her knees, her chin cupped in her hands, she sat staring into the fire. Like a cinema through her mind passed all the strange ports she had called at; all the wild countries she had visited; all the white waifs and strays, members of the Lost Legion, who had crossed her path. But hard as she thought she could not find one who fitted in entirely with Burney's sketch.
